

INTERPROFESSIONAL EDUCATION (IPE)

Saint Louis University's Interprofessional Education (IPE) program offers both a concentration and a minor in interprofessional practice for undergraduate students interested in a career in health-related professions. The three courses in SLU's concentration have been aligned to meet six attributes of the Undergraduate University Core (UUC), so it is an efficient way for students to meet both IPE and UUC requirements.

Interprofessional education (IPE) is defined by the World Health Organization as "When students from two or more professions learn about, from, and with each other to enable effective collaboration and improve health outcomes."

Leadership

Anthony Breitbach, Ph.D., ATC, FASAHP, FNAP (<https://www.slu.edu/doing/faculty/breitbach-anthony.php>)

Director of interprofessional education

Programs

- Interprofessional Collaboration, Microcredential (<https://catalog.slu.edu/colleges-schools/academic-affairs/interprofessional-education/interprofessional-collaboration-micro/>)
- Interprofessional Practice, Concentration (<https://catalog.slu.edu/colleges-schools/academic-affairs/interprofessional-education/interprofessional-practice-concentration/>)
- Interprofessional Practice, Minor (<https://catalog.slu.edu/colleges-schools/academic-affairs/interprofessional-education/interprofessional-practice-minor/>)

Contact Us

For more information about our interprofessional education program, including the concentration and minor in interprofessional practice, as well as the microcredential in interprofessional collaboration, please email ipe@slu.edu.