

DEPARTMENT OF INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS

The Department of International Business at Saint Louis University's Richard A. Chaifetz School of Business (<https://www.slu.edu/business/>) prepares students to operate effectively in a complex, interconnected global economy. Students develop the ability to analyze international markets, navigate cross-cultural differences and make informed decisions within diverse political, economic and regulatory environments.

The department offers comprehensive programs at the undergraduate, graduate and doctoral levels that integrate core business disciplines with a global perspective. A distinguishing feature of the program is the involvement of experienced global executives who contribute directly to the curriculum through teaching and student mentorship. Their perspectives bring real-world context to the study of international trade, global strategy and cross-border operations.

Experiential learning is central to the international business curriculum. Study abroad programs, internships and engagement with global business professionals provide students with direct exposure to international markets and business practices. These experiences deepen cultural understanding and strengthen students' ability to apply classroom knowledge in real-world settings.

Students benefit from a range of support resources, including student organizations and access to alumni and professional networks that facilitate mentorship and career development.

The international business major and minor are also available for students studying at Saint Louis University-Madrid (<https://www.slu.edu/madrid/>).
